

What is a root canal?

A root canal is the removal of the infected or damaged nerve of the tooth, and these nerves reside inside canals in the tooth.

A root canal may be necessary if the nerves have become damaged, infected, exposed due to trauma to the teeth or if you have an abscess of your tooth due to an infection that is primarily caused by cavities.